

Situational Sales Leadership

Mastering the Single-Most Important
Sales Management Skill

Every successful sales leader wants to accomplish three things:

- Connect with their salespeople so they trust them completely
- Coach their sales team to excellence in execution
- Crush their number year after year after year

How do you do that?

Meet Hilary ...

Hilary is a bright, talented sales rep for a fast-growing technology company. She works hard and hits goal every year. Hilary has great client management and interpersonal skills and is known in the company as a top performer. People like Hilary, and she likes the energy a new challenge gives her. Hilary is now being asked to take on some new responsibilities to build the business and to prepare her for a sales management position for which she's been recommended.

Scenario One

What is the specific goal Hilary needs to complete?

What is her competence in completing this goal?

What is her commitment in completing this goal?

What is Hilary's development level?

Hilary has been asked to craft a new business development strategy for a very important client. She will need to put in a lot of extra time just to get it done, and she doesn't see enough of her daughter or her husband as it is. Her sales manager has told her to do the initial work on this strategy by herself, but the complexity of this task is overwhelming. She knows she does not have a good enough grasp of the client's business or current company's options in this situation. Hilary wishes she could get more information on how to complete this project.

Scenario Two

What is the specific goal Hilary needs to complete?

What is her competence in completing this goal?

What is her commitment in completing this goal?

What is Hilary's development level?

Hilary has been asked to put together a multinational team to increase her company's business with selected global accounts. This is a fabulous opportunity for her, and she's excited about it. However, she doesn't have contacts in several of the markets, hasn't ever worked internationally, and isn't sure where to start.

Scenario Three

What is the specific goal Hilary needs to complete?

What is her competence in completing this goal?

What is her commitment in completing this goal?

What is Hilary's development level?

Hilary has been asked to make a presentation to a key group of decision-makers in an account she's been working with for a long time. There's a lot of new business at stake, but Hilary knows exactly what she needs to say and feels confident about her preparation. Hilary is always at her best when she's asked to make a compelling case for her company's products and services.

Scenario Four

What is the specific goal Hilary needs to complete?

What is her competence in completing this goal?

What is her commitment in completing this goal?

What is Hilary's development level?

The VP of Sales in Hilary's company has recently instituted a new weekly sales report. Each sales rep has been asked to report on five key performance indicators every Friday. As a top performer, Hilary doesn't see any value in taking time to compile the information, although all she has to do is pull the data from the notes she's already entered into the company's sales force software. She hasn't submitted the form in two weeks and word is starting to get around that Hilary isn't doing the weekly report. The VP of Sales is concerned others will follow her lead.

Scenario Five

What is the specific goal Hilary needs to complete?

What is her competence in completing this goal?

What is her commitment in completing this goal?

What is Hilary's development level?

Hilary has been asked to cut her selling expenses by 10% in order to increase profitability. She's concerned that the cuts, like last time, will have an impact on the ability to drive new business. Hilary believes she can bring in more revenue if she goes ahead with the planned expenditures. She's convinced that this is the best approach to greater profitability: increasing sales with key accounts and building new business. She has her immediate manager's support, but her manager has asked her to make the case to his manager. Hilary's nervous. What if she isn't persuasive?
